

The effort to relax rules against consolidation of ownership of public media represents a serious threat to democracy because it limits opportunities for open discourse.